1994 D.M.A.	Composition, University of South Carolina
1991 M.M.	Composition, University of South Carolina
1988 B.A.	Composition, College of Charleston, S.C.

Experience

1995-Present

Professor of Music at Westmont College. Teaching duties include the four levels of music theory courses and labs for music majors and minors as well as teaching all levels of applied music to students of private composition. Other courses taught in alternating sequence are Orchestration, Form and Analysis, and Basic Musicianship. Chair of the music department since fall semester 2003.

2006

Organized and hosted a performance of art songs, "American Giants: Paul Laurence Dunbar and Langston Hughes" at Westmont College by Darryl Taylor, the founder of the African American Art Song Alliance.

2005

Organized and hosted a performance and master class by Petar Jankovic, a Serbian international award winning classical guitarist.

2004

Organized and hosted a performance and master class by American Pianist Heidi Louise Williams, Associate Professor of piano from Southern Illinois University Carbondale School of Music.

2001

As Chairperson for the regional meeting, I organized the Western Regional Chapter of the Christian Fellowship of Art Music Composers on January 25-26, 2001. All meeting events were held on the campus of Westmont College. Highlights of the meeting included a composer-to-composer session with film composer Kevin Manthei and Donald Wilson, a performance of selected members' works, as well as peer sessions to review scores and recordings. I organized every aspect of the meeting including the "call for scores", judging the submissions, all correspondence with composers, contracting the performers, organizing the rehearsals, writing the publicity, designing the programs, and organizing the refreshments. I made the live recording and completed the studio post-production of the compact disc of the attending composers' works.

1996-Present

Near the completion of each semester since 1996 I have advised the student composers in a public concert of original works. These concerts involve the composers at every level of the art. The process of realizing a public performance involves much more than simply composing the music. We have to find musicians who are willing to take time out of their always already busy schedules and learn a new piece of music. To exacerbate this difficulty, the music is often more complex than traditional music, thus requiring even more of the average musician. We must organize all aspects of the performances, with topics including, but not be limited to: publicity, programs, refreshments, stage and theater management, as well as sound recording and studio post-production.

1990-Present:

Progressive background in computer generated music, Musical Instrument Digital Interface (MIDI), and digital/analogue recording techniques. Although I have ample experience in the traditional aspects of composition, in recent years I have been concentrating more on technological trends in creating music. I have worked in a variety of recording situations, from live performance to multi-track studio mixing, with experience in digital as well as analogue audio and video. The technological aspect of my instructional work at Westmont covers a broad array of reasonably sophisticated hands-on equipment.

Recipient of an ASCAP Award: ASCAP Awards for composers are determined annually by distinguished members of the national music community. The panelists are neither members nor employees of ASCAP and thus are completely independent in their determinations as to which members shall receive awards. The classification of my work is for composers of works traditionally considered to be in the field of Concert Music. The primary basis for Panel determinations is the activity generated by each member's catalog, particularly with regard to recent commissions and performances.
